"I said, 'I'm not going." "'No?' he sneered, and got up from his chair. He stumbled across the room to a great, old-fashloned desk, and got a revolver. 'Now, beat it,' he yelled, 'and damned guick! "'All right,' I said, 'but I won't

In time, Barry thought. The Judge had risen, tense, and so excited that he seemed on the verge of collapse. "And that was that," Barry calmed him,

"Not quite," Judge Hambidge continued, but in a lower tone, "When I got to the bottom of the stepsthe stone steps, I mean-I stood thinking. If I left that way, there was no telling what Kelly might do. The got to go through. I thought. "It's twin either way, but, if I obey orders, ruln only for me. I'd bet ter give in. I couldn't make ur my mind, though. I kept looking back, balf decided. And, suddenly a queer thing happened. The front door same open."

The Julge mopped his hands

"I'd shut it carefully," he resumed "but there it was, wide, almost like an invitation. I walked into the hall The glass doors to the drawing room were clased, but I could see the light through them. When I put my hand on the knob, the lights went out. I turned the knob, and pushed, but the door wouldn't open. Not latched at was as if some on was holding it. 'Kelly,' I thought, 'He won't let me in. I've got to not quak now." Almost in a daze, I sanctered up to the arenne, At nine with k, I gave the decision to my clerk, and sold him to file it immediately. A few hours later, L learned that Kelly was dead. The papers said his body was found stretched across that door to the hall. I knew then it was there when I left the house, and that was why I couldn't open the door."

Pat said, "Are you satisfied?" "Are you?" Barry asked "Or would you rather that I tried to and who killed Kellyr'

"Five minutes. Maybe, a little more."

"Do you think some one opened it? Some one who, then, went in to Kelly?"

"You mean, the murderer?" Barry nodded.

"No. That's the last thing he would have done. The door probably didn't latch when I closed it." "While you were in the house, did you see anyone but Kelly?" "No. We were shut in together." "Did, you hear anyone?"

"Since you mention it, once I did think a heard the front door close. I may have imagined it, but now I remember Kelly asked, 'Who's that in the hall?' It was about half an hour after we went into the drawing room, and I looked out, but there wasn't anyone."

"He-or she-may have gone into the dining room," Barry said. "Whoever killed Kelly came out of the dining room; I'm certain of that."

"Why?" "Because the drink Kelly offered you was Scotch whisky. Was there anything else in the room?"

"If there had been, I'd've asked for it."

"Exactly. And the weapon that crushed Kelly's skull was a cutglass decanter containing rye whisky.

"In the five minutes you were standing on the pavement," Barry reasoned, "some one came out of that dining room with that decanter, and struck Kelly. There was no time for a quarrel. That man-or that woman-knew what he-or she -was going to do."

"Why do you say 'she'?" Pat asked. "This wasn't a woman's inal would have brought the weapon, and it wouldn't've been a cutglass deconter. A criminal might have worn gloves, to prevent leaving Anger prints. But, since this wasn't a criminal, the fact that there were no finger-prints suggests that the murderer just happened to be wearing gloves."

"And?" Pat inquired, tensely, "And men don't often wear gloves on a warm night. Women do.

It was a warm night." "It was very warm," the Judge

"You are a shrewd young man," the girl gibed at him. "But your assumptions are ridiculous. Gloves! Anyone might have worn 'em. Anyone might remember the risk of leaving finger prints, and wipe them off a bottle with a handkerchief. Anyone might've come in through an volatched door-any time after my father left."

"But," Harry objected, "Kelly was dead then." "How do you know that? How do we know my father wasn't right when he thought Kelly was keepldg him out? All your conjectures lead nowhere, Mr. cilibert. The only discovery you've made is that father saw Kelly after young Ridder did. And, on I told you, that's morely implicating one innocent man inalend of mustace,"

"And you " "Naturally, it's the second Innocent man I care about. Especially alms the tensioner of mirdes wouldn't his a your disclosures from discrating ton "

Her voice broke.

"Ridder'll be free in a few weeks." she pled. "Walt, Mr. Gilbert. You don't know how many innocent people you may drag into this."

Barry hesitated. He now remembered that he had told Pat he loved her. "It didn't get me anywhere," Barry thought. "It never will. I'm not even sure that she heard me, but I'm glad 1 spoke, all the same."

Aloud, he said, "I'll wait, Pat." She glanced at him gratefully.

"Not until the trial, though," he warned her. "I won't take that chance. I won't let this girl, Peggy, go on suffering until then. But now I believe I know who murdered Kelly. Someone who came into the house while your father was there. Someone so full of the thought of it that she bungled the new lock on the front door."

"You think—" Hamblege began.
"I think that's why it blew open. And I think, too, that revealing your visit—now—would be merely 'fipping our hand.' The person I suspect has already covered her tracks pretty well."

"Then," Pat said almost incredulously-"Then you're not going to repeat this story?"

"Not even to Winslow. He hasn't much more faith in my 'sleuthing' than you have. We'll leave him to work out Ridder's defense. For the present let's agree on an armistice. Mutual silence. If the time arrives when I feel I must speak, I'll come to you first. Is that fair?" "Quite."

From the very beginning, Barry had suspected Mrs. Kelly. "She sued for divorce recently, and withdrew the case," Peter Winslow had told him. "Do you think that might Indicate that she killed her husband?" Barry dld, and one discovery after another confirmed the idea. "But," as Barry had remind- Bennett of Bethel were som ed his city editor, "Mrs. Kelly was hear of the loss of their home in Harlem. She went to a dance," ifire last week. "Kelly wasn't killed at midnight,"

Barry realized. "He wasn't killed until two hours after midnight. If Mrs. Kelly got through with her prizes-"

"Well," Barry exulted, climbing into the subway. What next? Say nothing, and saw wood-that's what."

Monday morning Barry dropped In on Peter Winslow. Obviously, he was doing a great deal. "Got the defeuse all planned," he declared, showing Barry a thick sheaf of memoranda, "Loose-leaf" memoranda it was, in the most literal sense-scrawled on waste paper gar Dunham, this place; and and the backs of envelopes. "There's nothing to this case," he continued. "It'll come to trial in a few weeks now, and be over in a few hours. Want to hear what I'm going to ask that Fill. pino?"

Listening, Barry felt again that his own activities had been merely toolish. A dozen questions disposed of all the evidence the butler had given so far, and made it apparent that what he actually knew of young Ridder's visit was actually nothing, "You heard a quarrel?
